

Thought by Sarah

Isn't nature wonderful.
My heart uplifted when I saw this shoot appear, this poor plant looked dead; it had been in a pot and had dried out.
Replanting and watering has brought new life.

We can learn a lot from nature about God, nothing is impossible for God.

It may seem bleak but asking God to come into the situation helps us see in different ways. God turns things upside down, he promises us that he will give strength and strategies to survive any circumstance. I find that God enables priorities to change and life has more meaning.

Covid 19 has changed our way of life and hopefully it has also changed the way we look at people. We respect those who are serving others and we need to say thank you especially to those who have put themselves at risk from the virus. May that respect continue as everyone has a part to play in society, everyone is valuable and has their own individual contribution to make.

Thank you God that you know each of us, our weaknesses and strengths, you know what we excel at. Help us to follow your direction and value those around us for who they are. Help us to find the new shoots within us that can blossom and bring joy and blessings to others.

Thank you for those who have unselfishly put themselves at risk for the sake of others. Amen
